Opinion

Response to Letter to Editor entitled Freedom For All

Dear Editor,
This letter is in response to the Opinion piece entitled Freedom For All by Edward Anderson.

In response to the article Freedom For All, I would like to point out some of the fallacies that were written. first the author of the piece.

Mr. Anderson said that Jews, Christians, and Muslims are all alike and that the Qur'an, Torah and the Bible are written on the same foundation. This is incorrect. Jesus is the foundation for Christianity. Christians believe that Jesus is the son of God and that He died on the cross and shed His blood to save a lost world from their sins. Christians also believe in the Trinity of God, which is God the Father, God the Son (Jesus) and God the Holy Spirit. Muslims specifically deny all of these things. They teach that it is blasphemy that Christians believe that Jesus is the Son of God and they believe Jesus was only a prophet (Qur'an 5:17, 5:75). They teach that Jesus did not actually even die on the cross, but it was only someone who looked like Him (Qur'an 4:156-158). They also say it is blasphemy to believe in the Trinity of God. (Qur'an 4:171, 5:70-75). Clearly the god of Islam is not the same God as Christians believe in. Islam directly teaches against the beliefs of Christianity in its holy book. It is the only religion in the world to do so.

Mr. Anderson also said that all religions want peace. This is true. The question that must be asked though is according to Islam what is the definition of peace? Let us take a look at what Islam has to say about peace in the world. Here is what Qur'an 9:29 says "Fight those who believe not in Allah nor the last day, nor hold that forbidden which hath been forbidden by Allah and his apostle nor acknowledge the religion of truth of the people of the Book (the Jews and the Christians) until they pay the Jizya with willing submission and feel themselves subdued." Clearly in this passage Muslims are called to fight against non-Muslims until they submit to their rule and pay the special tax that only non-Muslims have to pay (jizya). Qur'an 9:5 echoes the same thing. Qur'an 47:4 calls on Muslims to smite the necks of non-Muslims. Qur'an 98:6 says that non-Muslims are the worst of creatures and that they will dwell in hell forever. As you can see Islam teaches that true peace is brought through Muslims having rule over non-Muslims. Basically you have three choices in Islam if you are not Muslim. You can convert to Islam. You can remain a non-Muslim but you will have to pay the non-Muslim tax and live under Islamic law. Which gives Muslims more rights than non-Muslims. If you refuse both of these then Muslims are commanded to kill you. This is spelled out in Qur'an 9:5 and 9:29. So peace will be brought when Islamic law rules the world according to the teachings of Islam.

Many may say I am misquoting Islam and what it teaches. I agree there are many Muslims who do not practice these things or they simply choose to ignore these teachings. I believe this is because they are not aware of what their religion really teaches. Many Muslims are Muslim in name only. They do not actually practice the faith or even read the Qur'an. The same is true for Christianity. Many people say they are Christian but never read their Bible or go to church. That being said you can easily and readily find Muslim leaders preaching the very things I have mentioned above. Daily on mainstream middle east TV you have these things being presented. Just have a look at the Middle East Media Research Institute website for what is being said daily by Muslim leaders. You will also find them calling for the destruction of Israel and America. You will even find the Palestinian Authority who Israel is supposed to negotiate with saying these things. How can Israel negotiate with these terrorists? You also have many American Muslim leaders who call for these very same thing.

When Mr. Anderson says "Our religions all strive for peace, for happiness and for freedom." He is correct but you have one side that is calling for war until the world submits to religious law and you have the other saying "But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you;" (Matthew 5:44)

Smoking=The #1 leading cause of preventable death.
Secondhand Smoke=The #2 leading cause of preventable death.

Mom & Dad Please,
You're KILLING Us.

The billboard pictured above is located on US 27, across from the Phillip Sharp Middle School, to help draw awareness to smokers and secondhand smoke. It is paid for by Champions For A Drug Free Pendleton County.

How secondhand smoke affects the brain

Even if you don't smoke, a new study shows, secondhand smoke affects your brain much as it does a smoker's. It's one more reason to steer clear of secondhand smoke in cars and other enclosed spaces.

Tobacco is the leading cause of preventable death nationwide. People who smoke are up to six times more likely than nonsmokers to have a heart attack. Tobacco also causes cancer. Up to 90% of lung cancer deaths are linked to smoking.

But the smoker isn't the only one harmed by tobacco smoke. Secondhand smoke can make it more likely you'll get heart disease, have a heart attack or die early. Smokers find it harder to quit if they're around secondhand smoke. And kids exposed to secondhand smoke are more likely to become teenage smokers.

A team of NIH-funded scientists decided to take a closer look at how secondhand smoke affects the brains of young adults. About half of the study volunteers were nonsmokers. The rest were tobacco-dependent cigarette smokers.

Each volunteer sat in a car for one hour while a smoker puffed away on a cigarette to create secondhand smoke. On a different day, the volunteers had a one-hour car session without being exposed to secondhand smoke. Their brains were scanned before and after each session.

The researchers discovered the addictive chemical nicotine—both in the blood and attached to molecules in the brain after exposure to secondhand smoke. This nicotine binding was similar in smokers and nonsmokers. The smokers also had stronger cravings after being exposed to secondhand smoke.

"These results show that even limited secondhand smoke exposure delivers enough nicotine to the brain to alter its function," says Dr. Nora D. Volkow, director of NIH's National Institute on Drug Abuse.

Family upset with neighbor shooting family dog

In last week's issue of The Falmouth Outlook, a Letter to the Editor was submitted by Joan and Robert Caldwell. Their letter was in concern of their neighbor, Danny Friedly, who had shot their daughter's pet in the Oak Haven subdivision.

The paper had the wrong spelling of the name. It should have read by Joan and Robert Caldwell instead of Jean. The newspaper regrets this error.

David and Rachel are all moved in and starting to feel like home. Hopefully we can all help to make them feel like they are home.

David left us with a bit of a challenge during his message last week. He said he wanted the members to make a name around town for hanging out with the unloved, the sinners, those who have forgotten about the church. How are we doing so far?

It was the pastor's first communion service that he's performed and he did a great job.

Our first dinner with our new preacher was held this Sunday as well as the board meeting.

Don't forget about Vacation Bible School to be held July 20-22 from 6-8 Wed. through Friday. We will be cooking up some good food and learning those three days. All youngsters in the area are invited.

Please pray for Brenda Hitch's brother and for Courtney this week.

Come visit us here we are like family.

We began our worship service by recognizing those having birthdays in July and awarding the Sunday school attendance banners for June. The Hilda Wolfe class won the adult banner and the pre-school class took the childrens banner.

How are weed eaters and Christians similar? Bro. Cohen explained that a weed eater is what it claims. It is known by its works. A weed eater that doesn't eat weeds is useless. Can you see the similarity? They come in various styles, but at the core they are all the same.

Christians should worry less about the labels and more about working together. Both work best when the fuel is mixed just right and you don't want to try to use either when the gasoline is stale. Not all jobs require the same power, some require finesse. Remember that people notice the conditions of our lawns and they notice the condition of our lives.

Falmouth United Methodist

The United Methodist Church is a connectional church, which in essence means that we are one denominational body with many locations. For instance, there are five locations of the United Methodist Church in Pendleton County: Butler, Concord, Carter's Chapel, Falmouth, and Pine Grove. Each location is a mission station of the same church. With our connectionalism we not only make a difference in our own communities, but also throughout the world.

Collectively we assist with the education of ordained or licensed ministers within United Methodism, we have a university in Africa, and fund a wide variety of missions. In the state we have four camps and retreat centers, a children's home, and assist in the planting of new faith communities. So the next time you look at what may appear to be a "small" United Methodist Church, rest assured that together they/we are doing big things.

Falmouth Wesleyan

Jimmy Carter, the first president to be born in a hospital, a student of nuclear physics and a speed reader who can read almost 2000 words a minute. A complex and extremely talented man, yet the most significant event in his life occurred with the discipline of his parents.

At the age of five he was punished by his father for stealing from the collection plate at a church, a penny. Jimmy Carter then realized the seriousness of Christianity and one's relationship with Christ.

God has many ways to correct us. We must simply open our hearts. What would the events of Jimmy Carter's life included if he would not have applied a simple lesson from his own father? However, look where application of his father's instructions took him.

Let us all open our hearts to God's teachings, and be excited with the places He can take us!!

-Pastor Wes Shoemaker

Glenwood Baptist

Many churches today have signs out front that say "come as you are" and that usually refers to how one is dressed. Jesus also says "come as you are" but He is referring to a spiritual condition. In Matthew 11:25-30 Jesus invites "all who labor and are heavy burden" to come to Him for rest. He will take that burden of sin and shame from you. He will give you a new burden, one that is light and easy; a burden for Himself.

Come as you are without hope of self-justification. In Luke 13:11-12 there was a woman who had been crippled for eighteen years. She came to Jesus and got "straightened out". She could not do this herself. You need spiritual "straightening" spiritual healing. Come as you are to Jesus and He will heal you.

Harvest Community

How do we "stand firm in the Lord?" We must keep our

Pleasant Hill

Some of you may not realize that no one tells me what to write for these articles. I do not get talking points from a denominational headquarters. I also do not preach from a common lectionary; I am free to preach the Bible as I see fit for our members. I also do not fear a denomination telling me to leave my church after so many years.

Local church autonomy is found throughout the pages of the New Testament. No church had control over another; they were self-governing, without the help or control of some outside institution. They sent preachers and gave benevolence to other needy believers as they saw fit, without a central church or organization running the show.

These things are man-made things, not from God's word, and are sinful. The smallest, largest, and only authorized institution in the Lord's body is the local church. It's just that simple.

Faith is the bridge between you and God. It is the bridge which God has ordained. If all were seen and known, there would be no merit in doing it right. Therefore, God has ordained that we do not see or kn ow directly. But we can experience the power of His spirit through our faith. It is the bridge between us and Him, which we can take or not, as we will. We must make the choice ourselves. We must make the venture of belief. (Romans 1:16-17)

Harvesting Blueberries

Summer months are the harvest season for blueberries and blackberries, both of which have the potential to grow very well in Kentucky. Blueberries, which are native to North America, are harvested from early June through early August. Blackberries are harvested from mid-June to early October. These delicious fruits offer newly recognized health benefits, but best of all, they capture the essence of summer in their sweetness.

Blueberries can be excellent choices for both home and commercial growing. They have the advantage of being as long-lived as fruit trees, with few pests or diseases. They also have a late blossom time, so frost rarely causes damage on well-chosen sites. Blackberries also have a long fruit-bearing life and will produce for a decade or longer in Kentucky.

Blueberries require an acidic soil, which means that most soils in Kentucky will need to be amended to properly suit their needs. They also require a high organic material content, so peat moss (do not substitute other materials) should be mixed with the soil at the time of planting. Irrigation is necessary during the summer because blueberries have a shallow, limited root system. Insufficient irrigation can compromise both this year's and next year's crop.

Blackberries need to be pruned, fertilized and irrigated. Pruning varies, depending on the type of bramble; for specific information on the proper pruning for your blackberry canes, see the University of Kentucky's publication "Growing Blackberries and Raspberries in Kentucky." It's available online at <http://www.ca.uky.edu/agc/pubs>

/ho/ho15/ho15.pdf or by contacting your local office of the UK Cooperative Extension Service.

Blueberries in a cluster do not ripen at the same time, and only fully ripe berries should be picked. Fruit need at least one to two days after turning blue to develop full flavor and can be left on the bush for up to 10 days without a loss in size. Flavor does not improve once the fruit is picked; consequently, blueberries should be left on the bush for as long as possible to develop sweetness and flavor.

For best results at harvest, pick carefully, rolling blueberries from the cluster with the thumb into the palm of the hand. Handle as little as possible to avoid rubbing off the bloom (the light waxy finish on the skin) and reduce bruising. Harvest only when berries are dry. Refrigerate promptly to slow ripening and decay.

Blackberries picked for commercial sale are picked "firm ripe," but home growers have the luxury of picking soft, fully ripe and juicy fruit. Pick fruit twice a week, and during hot rainy weeks, every other day. Harvest after the morning dew has dried. Pick carefully to avoid bruising the fruit, and, as with blueberries, refrigerate quickly to limit fruit rot. The sweetest, best tasting fruit is produced during dry sunny weather when nights are cooler.

For more information, see UK's publications on growing blueberries and blackberries available online at <http://www.ca.uky.edu/agc/pubs/ho/ho60/HO60.PDF> and <http://www.ca.uky.edu/agc/pubs/ho/ho15/ho15.pdf>, or contact the Pendleton County Cooperative Extension Service.

State 4-H Horse show

The July State 4-H Horse Show showcases what 4-H members—alongside 900 peers—have accomplished during the year with their project horse, but an entire year's worth of work precedes the actual show. In the final weeks leading up to the State 4-H Horse Show—or any big show—here are some things to keep in mind. Routine. Stick to whatever routine you already have with your horse. Feed the same thing at the same time in the same amount in the same way. This is not the time to make any changes. Horses like routine!

Feed, hay and water. Bring extra hay and feed so you will not have to alter your feeding schedule. Keep in mind that you are likely to feed additional hay to keep your horse occupied during the long hours he spends in the stall, so bring extra bales. Also, make sure your horse is used to drinking water from other sources. One way to get around this is to add Gatorade, Kool-Aid, or another electrolyte source to his water. This must be done some time in advance of the show. Remember, don't change your routine at the show. Certificate of veterinary inspection. You will not be admitted onto the show grounds without the correct health papers. Check your show's requirements (negative Coggins, Piroplasmosis, etc.) well in advance.

Farrier. Have your farrier trim and/or shoe a minimum of one to two weeks in advance so any issues will be resolved by show day.

Truck and trailer. Service your truck and trailer before the show season starts. Keep a tool chest with basic repair equipment (including a jack) on the truck. Stock the trailer with an extra halter and lead rope, leg wraps and a first aid kit. Miscellaneous items to keep on the truck include: a map of the area, pocket knife, screw eyes/webbing, snaps, rain gear, sewing kit, safety pins, duct tape, twine and clean rags. As a precaution, always stock your trailer with water for your horse to drink in case the truck breaks down. Stock a minimum of two 5-gallon water jugs, and take larger amounts on a long trip and/or if the weather is predicted to be very hot/humid.

First aid kit. Clearly label a first aid kit with emergency phone numbers (your and your family's numbers, your veterinarian, and any other pertinent emergency contact information). A basic first aid kit should include: rubbing alcohol, poultice, clean towels or rags, disposable diapers, duct tape, Epsom salt, a topical antibiotic ointment such as nitrofurazone, gauze sponges, latex gloves, hydrogen peroxide, povidone-iodine topical antiseptic, needles and syringes — 1" for IV and 1 or 1.5" for IM — (only if you are proficient at injections), plastic wrap, roll cotton, saline solution, sharp scissors, silver sulfadiazine, sharps container, thermometer, vet wrap and wet wipes.

Dry run. Get your horse used to the trailer and show grounds by taking him to smaller local shows before attempting a trip to a large or important show. Let him experience the hubbub and excitement when breaks in his concentration won't count against you. Putting in extra time in preparation will ensure a better show experience for you, your horse and your family. Practice. Practice. Practice. Practice. Especially if your class requires patterns! Patterns are posted well in advance, so know what is expected of you.

Read the rule book. Read it, understand it, use it. The rule book lists in black and white what is allowed and what is not allowed. For instance, some of the tack you use at home may not be permitted in certain classes. Know the rules so you don't encounter any problems during the show.

Body condition score. Know your horse's BCS. Horses scoring below a 4 will not be allowed to participate in 4-H shows. This rule promotes animal husbandry that upholds year-round horse health.

My plate; eating healthy

The MyPlate icon, with a plate, fork and drinking glass, simplifies the message for healthy eating. The plate is divided into four unequal sections—vegetables and fruits fill the left half, and grains and protein fill the right. The glass represents dairy products. The straightforward visual makes the recommendations for eating different food groups clear.

The new, simplified dietary plan from the U. S. Department of Agriculture and Department of Health and Human Services covers balancing calories, increasing certain foods (fruits, vegetables, whole grains) and decreasing others (items with high sodium, solid fats, added sugar and sugary drinks). The message also covers eating the correct number of calories and increasing activity.

Here are highlights of the new MyPlate suggestions: Build a healthy plate. Make half of your plate fruits and vegetables. Switch to skim or 1percent milk. Make a minimum of half of your grains whole grain. Vary protein choices, eating seafood twice a week and eating more beans, a natural source of protein and fiber.

Cut back on foods high in solid fats, added sugars and salt. Choose foods with little or no added sugar, opting for water, fruits for dessert, and 100 percent fruit juice over sugary options. Watch sodium levels in foods. Eat fewer foods with a lot of solid fats, choosing lean meats and oils, and limiting snack foods (cakes, cookies, ice cream, hot dogs, sausages) that contain solid fats.

Eat the right number of calories. Staying within your calorie limit can help you maintain a healthy weight. Enjoy your food, but eat less. Cook at home so you are in control of your food. Choose lower calorie menu options when eating out. Write down what you eat so you can really keep track of calories. Be physically active. The health benefits of physical activity increase as you spend more time being active, so start by doing what you can, for at least 10 minutes at a time.

Read food labels. The Nutrition Facts label can help you quickly and easily make smart food choices. Check calories, and choose foods with lower calories, saturated fat, trans fat and sodium. Note the serving size of the nutrition analysis. The nutrition analysis is based on a 2,000 calorie diet. Check for added sugars, which come under various names. Food ingredients are listed in order of percentage by weight, so foods with sugars at or near the beginning of the list should be limited.
